By the identification of the girl found in the pond at Eagle Point, near Woodbury, N. J., the mystery of the tragedy is deepened to-day and the question now is. Was she murdered or did she kill herself?

The girl's body was identified by her sister, who, when she called on the coroner of the Jersey town, said that she would not disclose her identity except to say that she lived on the west side in this city.

The body was found in the pond last Tuesday. A description of the girl was sent broadcast. It was this description that sent the sister to look at the body. The dead girl had been buried in Potter's Field and was disintered.

Sit it mad not destroyed. The missing girl, the sister said, was twenty years old. She disappeared last May. At that time she was working for a banking firm in this city, and went to hat had went to that place, out it was not found.

From Atlantic City the girl had write, but until recently her family had not given up hope that she was live. She had no reason, so far as is known, to leave her home or to kill herself. For nearly a year search was kept up for the missing girl.

None of the clothing found on the body was recognized by the stranger, although it was closely examined. The body was reinered, and the sister stated that if any new facts came by light that will show her conclusively that the body is that of her sister she will claim it and remove it to this eity.

The stranger left immediately after for her home. She said that she wanted to escape all the notories we manded to every year.

Prof. Platt and a very severe test of his hypno-telepathic powers recently. He tried them on Gov. Odeli when the Police bill was under consideration. He fixed his gaze hard on Albany, made a few long-distance passes at the Governor, and then gathering the massive convolutions of his brain together, willed him to favor the police measure. But the Governor proved a non-receptive subject. His gangila were loose somewhere and the current went off into a bunch of electrolysis. If it were not for rheumatism, about one-third of the doctors would quit he practice of medicine.

Think of the thousands of people constantly getting treatment for this rouble! A steady stream of sufferers, always seeking aid from their physiian, and always in vain! This statement doesn't give much comfort t hose who are afflicted in this way, but it is an undoubted fact that ordinary ractice does not and cannot cure rheumatism. Usual methods are directed oward temporary relief and not toward cure.

When a rheumatic sufferer goes to his doctor he wants some kind of im nediate result, relieving the aches and pains and stiffness. To effect this some mineral combination of drugs is given which stimulates circulation and inspires hope of a cure which is never accomplished. I wonder constantly that the fallacy of these methods is not plain to all. You know and I know, also, that surface applications for rheumatism are merely useful for local stimulation and cannot possibly reach the disturbing influences.

onstitutional treatment," or a "general tonic," you prepare yourself for a long list of expensive prescriptions and substantial consultation fees. After few weeks of this the absence of material gain impresses you, and you nake up your mind that you are only entitled to about so much health.

Of course, there is a cure for rheumatism, and thousands have found it, leclaring it in unmistakable terms of gratitude. The medicine that effects hese positive and permanent results is Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, which is composed entirely of vegetable elements. The prompt work of this medicine astopishes those who have tried all other treatment. Its benefits get into the whole system, through a perfect circulation of the blood, and instead of producing shock by stimulating, it aids the processes of the stomach and drives out any foreign element and all excess of acids.

Absolute and perfect health follows the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura, and the process is not a long one.

I am convinced there does not exist a case of rheumatism anywhere which Dr. Greene's medicine will not completely cure, and it costs so little to make a trial of it.

Why do you not try it?
